The Circuit Court. The February term of the Court of General Sessions for Anderson county convened on last Monday morning at ten o'clock a. m., kis Honor Judge J. B. His Honor inquired if the Solicitor had any bills of ineveral indictments, and his Honor said:

I have no special matters peated hereafter. I have no special matters that I deem necessary to bring to your attention. The Legislature at its recent session enacted some very wholesome laws, which will probably remove many of the causes of crimes the commission of which in our midst tended to bring reproach upon the fair name of our State. There is no matter of special local importance for me to call to your attention. Your county has established a name for good order and thrift that is highly créditable to you. This reputation extends over the State, and perhaps beyond its limits into other States. You have enjoyed immunity all along from those have enjoyed immunity all along from those rauds in your local affairs which have inolved other communities so heavily in debt, thereby imposing upon them very great burdens. It is, therefore, unnecessary for me to direct your attention to any of these things. I congratulate you upon such a condition of prosperity and upon the law-abiding disposition of the citizens in your county. As the grand inquest of the county you have a general supervision of the ad-ministration of the laws in Anderson county, and upon the judicious exercise of your powers will depend in a large measure the continuation of the wholesome condition of affairs to which I have alluded. You should examine into the manner in which the laws are executed in your county, and report any obstruction which tends to prevent justice or interfere with the public welfare. You have a supervision of the police of your county, of the public officers and the man-ner in which they discharge their trusts. You should look into these things, not because you expect to find anything wrong used by the farmers will be correspondingly but because this care and precaution on your increased. If there is not a hail, or a drouth, or something else to destroy the crop next tentional and otherwise, shall not creep into the administration of your county affairs. This unfortunate class of our citizens demand public spmpathy, and should be supplied by the spmpathy, and should be supplied by the county with substantial comforts. In some counties they have a farm attached to the poor house, which is run by the labor of the inmates, and in a considerable degree pays the expenses of the institution. This is, I think, the most desirable system where it is possible, for suitable labor in a moderate degree is promotive both to the health and contentment of the inmates, and renders the burden of the county as light as possible. A TRAGEDY IN HARTWELL, GA. Henry Hill, a Negro Prisoner, Kills T. V. Skelton, the Jailor, and Escapes Jail.

From the Hartwell (Ga.) Sun

On the night of the 23d ultimo, just after sunset, Mr. Thomas V. Skelton, the jailor of Hart County, went into the jail to feed and water Henry Hill, alias Henry Turner, colored, who was the only occupant, and who has been confined therein for some months under a charge of burglary, preferred against him by the Grand Jury at the last term of Hart Superior Court. Mr. Skelton had left Mr. J. L. Snipes, his copartner, that he was going to attend to the prisoner and go home early, as his wife was in great distress, having just heard of the death of her brother, Mr. N. K. Sullivan, of to go to jail and await his trial, and did not the store, and Mrs. Skelton, supposing take the law into their own hands and exefered no great uneasiness. About eight o'clock at night Mr. Snipes needed a key test, if forced upon them, and while their ton is well known in Anderson, and has which Mr. Skelton had, and sent a note send the key, when it was ascertained pause and reflect whether you will not that Mr. Skelton was not it home. This probably be adding the expense of a vexathat Mr. Skelton was not at home. This caused considerable uneasiness, and after search had been made at the various stores in town, Mr. Dobbins, the clerk of of the parties litigants is sure to lose. Mr. Skelton, and others, went to the jail Mr. Skelton, and others, went to the jail gation should prove successful and the enterprise be thereby deteated, are you sure fronting the cells. They found that open, transportation it is entirely dependent upon dictment to send to the Grand Jury, in gone. Next morning Mr. Allan McGee, felt this to be so burdensome that you regone. Next morning Mr. Allan McGee, after hearing the evidence the jury rendered a verdict, that Thomas V. Skelton was murdered by Henry Hill, alias Henry Turner, and recommended that the Governor offer a reward of five hundred dollars for his apprehension. The mancounty during the present year, and will ner in which the prisoner succeeded in accomplishing his hellish scheme seems to have been as follows: During last fall he attempted to make his escape by burning the jail, but was detected before he succeeded. After this he was put in another cell and chained until a short time ago, he got to limping and complaining kindness of heart, removed the chains from his limbs, but still kept him con fined in the cell. The chain was left in the cell fastened to the floor, which Hen ry succeeded in breaking off, the portion of the chain link where it was broken being left as sharp as a dull pocket knife. There is a small wicket or trap-door in the cell large enough for an ordinary man to squeeze through, which is used for passing food, water, &c., into the cell without opening the door (both the wicket and cell door are made of large iron bars). The wicket is fastened by a strong lock to a large bolt staple driven ten inches into the huge side timbers of the door. With the piece of chain he went to work, and by degrees tediously cut out the wood across the inner framing of the cell door so that be could drive out the large staple, lock and all, that con-fined the wicket. As his work pro-gressed he would fill the trench with cotton and carefully smooth it over with the lime that had been put in his cell for disinfecting purposes so there would be no danger of being detected, hiding his work from the outside of the cell. Having cut around the staple sufficiently, he pushed it out and that enabled him to crawl out of the cell into the hallway in front of the cells through the trap-door He was then in position to plan fully his purpose. He armed himself with pieces of plank torn from his bunk, and from the appearance of the surroundings it is likely that he took his position in the corner of the hall between the door entering the hall and the door of the cell, the one he occupied being the first one on the right as you enter, and quietly awaited the approach of his victim. Mr. Skelton unlocked the hall door, and, with a bucket of water in his hand, entered to approach the cell door, and doubtless as he took his first step into the hall received the merciless blow of the concealed assassin, who throttling him with his left hand, dealt the blows with his right. There were marks on the murdered contribute the contribution of all our people, according to the means of each one, to build a public improvement, in which all are alike interested. In a community like ours, where none can contribute very much, this method at least has the advantage of distributing the burden equally; and it is not right or just that a few of the most enterprising should bear the expense, when all are to share the benefits. according to the provisions which the law ceived the merciless blow of the concealed has made for them. As soon as possible after the commis sion of the terrible crime above described, the citizens of Hartwell and vicinity organized themselves into small squads and scoured the whole country for miles around for several days, but their searching was in vain, and the pursuit had about been abandoned with Saturday's work. On Sunday, however, Hill was captured near Bowman's, Elbert Academy, and has a flourishing school of County, Ga., by two gentlemen, Messrs. To the Delinquent Tax Payers of the PRESENTMENT OF GRAND JURY.
Savannah Valley Bailroad.

You will see from the advertisements of the Town and County Treasurers of last week that the penalty on the Savannah Valley Railroad Tax has been postponed to the 10th of March next. This has been done at the instance of the Directors of the Company, in the hope that you would, on second thought, come forward and pay this tax without further delay. They have read with regret the advertisement that appeared two or three weeks ago urging you not only resist its collection at the expense of a law This is one reason why they have de his store just about sunset, remarking to sired this further extension of time in which to pay, and, in their judgment, justifies this counter appeal on their part. They hesitate not to say that they will deprecate a law suit as a misfortune—not that hey have any reason to doubt the resultbut because litigation will certainly engen der bitterness of feeling and absorb a por Anderson, S. If the rates are easier now, what guarantee have you that they will remain so? What guarantee can you have so certain as that successful competition? Our rural population is especially interested in this view of the matter, for they pay for transportation as well on their cotton as on the goods

A divided people cannot expect to join in the march of public improvements.

They will soon be outstripped and left benind by other more enterprising communities, and to stand still in this age of progress is really to go backwards. Andersor was once thought to be the key to unlock the granaries of the West, and to distribute their products Southwardly and Eastward-ly, and to be on the highway from the North to the South. But she has failed so far to realize her destiny. A few years ago she was offered the opportunity of purchasing the Blue Ridge Railroad, with its magnifi cent promises for the future and its present utility in connecting us with the Air Line Railroad; but our people were not agreed upon it, and the opportunity was lost. The original corporators of the Air Line Road were citizens of our Town and County; they unguardedly transferred the charter to they unguardedly transferred the charter to strangers, and that Road was lost to us. Now it is possible to recover our lost posi-tion. A short and easily graded road from here to Easley's Station, for which we have a charter, will place us practically on the Air Line Road. There is a constantly in-creasing probability of the completion of the old Blue Ridge in the near future. Northern capitalists, it is said, are seeking to get control of the charter with this view; and the projection of the Savannah Valley Railroad, with its greatly shortened distance to the sea coast, is mentioned as one of the advantages of this route. As originally nceived, this Road was an offshoot of the old Blue Ridge, and there is no doubt that its revival will give a greater impetus to the building of the Blue Ridge Railroad.

But what sort of a spectacle shall we present to those whose eyes are turned upon our route if we quarrel among ourselves about the small pittance of taxes voted to grade the Road, and embark in a litigation over the matter that must retard the enterprise and involved a waste of a part of our small means. This tax is not a heavy one. It creates no debt, and has been paid by a large majority of the taxpayers, and is after

A contract to grade twenty miles of the A contract to grade twenty miles of the Road has been entered into upon the most favorable terms. It is thought that at least twenty miles more can be let upon terms equally favorable. This would insure the grading of the entire distance for the amount of the taxes.

been promptly paid, but one of the town-ships not taxed under the charter has yoluntarily subscribed $5,000, and secured it in a manner acceptable to the Company. Some of the citizens of that county resisted the payment of the tax levied for the Greenwood & Augusta Railroad, and appealed to the law, but their resistance was unsuccessful.

For these reasons, so briefly touched upon, let us hope hat you, who have not yet paid this tax, will do so at once, and place the Company in a position to vigor-ously prosecute the work with their whole B. F. WHITNER.

If upon its investigation you are of the opinion that the charge is not well founded, or is too frivolous to occupy the time of the Court, you will find no bill, and thus terminate the case. The witnesses will be sworn in open Court, and you wil call and examine witnesses in each case until you obtain evidence sufficient to satisfy tweive men on your panel that the case should be brought to trial. If after you have examed all of the State witnesses twelveof your number do not agree to a true bill, you will return no bill.

The first indictment submitted to you by the State is for resisting an officer. To make out this charge the State must prove that the person resisted was an officer of the was that the person resisted was an officer of the was that the person resisted was an officer of the was that the person resisted was an officer of the was that the person resisted was an officer of the was to receive a purse, and the second a true bill against him for burglary, and under that charge he has been confined in jail since. A short time after said term, during the early part of last November, he again attempted to escape jail by burning out, but was detected. He is about six feet two or three inches high, dark ginger-cake color, pockto such a great privilege? Mr. Samuel Fant was the unlucky man, as will be seen from the following result:

Samuel Fant, 9 rings; Thad. Gaines, 7; J. G. Cox, 6; Charlie Stewart, 5; James Zachary, 4; J. L. Farmer, 4; F. G. Brown. 4; W. P. Snelgrove, 2; John Burns, 1. It will be seen from the above that Messrs. Thadius Gaines, J. G. Cox and Charlie Stewart merited the distinction, and it was announced that the coronation would take place some time that night.

It had been announced several weeks previous that the ladies expected to give a hot supper for the benefit of the Academy, and that a ball would be given to the young people that night. Accordingly at nightfall people were coming from every direction death of a brother, which occurred a da, or two before. His funeral was preached at the Baptist Church on Friday morning by Rev. L. W. Stephens to a large assembly of people, and his remains deposited in the Hartwell cemetery, the Knights of Honor, of which Order he was a worthy member acting as pall hearers. He was Second Maid of Honor. The hot supper was quite a success, realizing about $70. This speaks well for Mrs. S. J. Gaines and the ladies who assisted her. The location of Townville is high and healthy, the population moral and correct, the temptations to vice are few compared with those that exist in most small towns, and her citizens are determined to establish an institution of high grade for boys and girls. May success crown their efforts. Mr. N. W. McAulay is Principal of the some sixty scholars. The citizens of the community are highly pleased with his instruction and training of the young. *

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
COUNTY OF ANDERSON.
To His Honor J. B. Kershaw, Presiding

Judge: The Grand Jury would herewith respectfully submit their Presentment— We congratulate the County upon the prosperity in temporal matters with which we are blessed, and the small amount of crime committed in proportion to our population.

We have visited the various public offices of the County, and find them all

We also sent a committee to the Poor House, and found the inmates well cared for, but we recommend some repairs to the buildings, and more suitable build-ings than those with which they are now provided. We find the Poor House in need of milch cows, and recommend that the cattle now there be exchanged for

We find that the county is in debt to various county officers for money advanced by them, and we think that this can be remedied by the collection by the Treasurer of the late liquor tax levied by the Legislature for the current expens of the several counties. We are also informed that liquor has been sold in the county contrary to this law, and we ur-gently call the attention of the proper fficers to this matter

Complaint has been made to us that Dennis Hardy, colored, and Ben Strickland are selling liquor in Hall township with-out license, and that William Banister and Daye McClellan are witnesses thereto; and we hereby present them for such ac-tion by the Court as may seem proper

We present also Solicitor Spear and Fannie Rice for adultery, and that Peter Hardy, Mary Brownlee, Clarinda Spear, Eugenia Harrison, Eady Cummings, Hepsy Harrison, Jasper Rice and Harriet Adams are material witnesses. We recommend that the roads be better attended to by the proper authorities and that sign boards be put up at the principal road forks and crossings.

We report that the county is infested with itinerant peddlers who sell without license, and we recommend that the Clerk publish such names as have been granted licenses, and that those peddling without license be locked after by the proper officers.

Thanking your Honor and the officers of the Court for courtesies shown, Respectfully submitted, PETER R. BROWN, Foreman. Anderson, S. C., March 1, 1881.
